This article, Unseelie, is part of the Extended Ancient Pantheon Expanded Universe. It may not be consistent with other timelines.

The Unseelie or the Darkened Ones as the Seelie like to refer to them are a racial/tribal collective of fey that theme themselves around darkness, the natural order of death and survival. They mostly live on the Eastern Continent of Tír na nÓg specifically within the confines of the Night Ash Forest for which their kingdom bears its name. Unlike their Seelie relatives the Unseelie favor 'burrows' or underground spaces as such they create elaborate cave and tunnel systems leading to their dwellings as such on the surface it can be hard to know if you are over an Unseelie village or even the capital city if you don't know what to look for.

The Unseelie Court

The ruling body of the tribal collective ruler by the royal family and their Archfey aristocracy-based families.

The Ducal Households

The Royal Family is backed by twelve ducal households that each consists of 18,433 ha (45,550 acres) of land holdings, including rural estates and farmland, urban developments, historic buildings, and commercial properties that surround the capital city ruled by the royal family. With Marque Households making up the borderlands while Count house holds occupy the corner areas between the Marques and the Ducal houses.

- House Autumn, a family of dryad descended Archfey.
- House Darkmore, a family of True Higher Vampire descended Archfey, unlike Bloodfey this family becomes a bat-like hybrid of Archfey instead.
- House Delarosa, a family of specter descended Archfey.
- House Eterna von Illumines, a family of phoenix descended Archfey.
- House Scarletwound, a family of curse hunting Archfey who derive power from the moon.

Marque/ess Households

Acted as the honored guards of the borderlands. They protect from potential threats from outside the borders, as the borders along the sea sometimes bleed into other worlds this is considered an important job.

Count/ess Households

Held the more secured pieces of land in between the Marque land and the ducal lands. They would maintain trade and supply routes from the outer territories run by the Marque/ess households with the Ducal and Royal Family lands.

Viscount/ess Households

The Viscount households lived within the lands of other higher-ranking aristocrats usually though there are exceptions.

Baron/ess Households

The Baron households lived within the lands of other higher-ranking aristocrats usually though there are exceptions.

Tribes belonging to the Unseelie

Fey (Magic Folk)

- High Fey (Medium Size)
  - Archfey
- Giants/Titans-Considered full-citizens of the Kingdom, many giants joined the Unseelie court as troops and soldiers with each clan getting a village within the borders where they have lived in relative peace due to the protection of the Court. Each Titan Chieftain answers directly to the royal family as such, Arawn considers them his friends.
  - Cloud Giant
  - Cyclops
  - Firbolgs
  - Fire Giants
  - Hill Giants
  - Ice Giants
  - Stone Giants
  - Storm Giants
- Goblinoids
  - Bugbears
  - Goblins
    - Hobgoblins
  - Kobolds
    - Bucca
    - Clabater
  - Leprechauns

- Greater Fey (Medium size)
  - Aen Teg (Fair Folk)- The result of the union between an Archfey and an Elf. This race makes up the majority of the population of The Capital City of the Golden Oak Forest as well as the Capital City of the Night Ash Forest. This change started during the first decade following the arrival of humans, elves, and dwarves, as many Archfey seduced the newcomers resulting in a new race with a higher birth rate than its parents. The Aen Teg do not have the breeding time window of their elven ancestors resulting in large population numbers, the Aen Teg are utterly loyal to their Archfey ancestors often serving in their houses and cities.
  - Blood Fey- The result of the union between an Archfey and a True Higher Vampire. They are considered a rare but powerful race, due to them having special requirements to increase their numbers, with other unions just resulting in children of their partner's race or no children at all if they breed with each other. New Bloodfey can be born if a Bloodfey breeds with an Archfey or a True Higher Vampire, with the former happening rarely and the latter all but impossible because of the absence of True Higher Vampires from Tír na nÓg.
  - Changeling- The result of the union between an Archfey and a human. This race makes up the second largest majority of the population of The Capital City of the Golden Oak Forest as well as the Capital City of the Night Ash Forest. This change started during the first decade following the arrival of humans, elves, and dwarves, as many Archfey seduced the newcomers resulting in a new race with a longer lifespan than its human parents. Changelings have an obsession with humans and often want to trick or mate with them, this is a race that the Republic of Mages diplomatic officers have to deal with the most.
  - Datanlolum Dwarves- The result of the union between an Archfey and a dwarf. This race makes up the third largest majority of the population of The Capital City of the Golden Oak Forest as well as the Capital City of the Night Ash Forest. This change started during the first decade following the arrival of humans, elves and dwarves, as many Archfey seduced the newcomers resulting in a new race with a longer lifespan than its dwarven parents, they also have perfect skin, hair, teeth, and eyes. They are considered far more beautiful than their dwarven parents. Unseelie Datanlolum Dwarves favor black clothing and can have hair shades such as a reddish or darker color hair ranging from brown to raven black.
- Large Fey (Large size)
